

Share Information to Prevent Infections

Strong communication protects the health and wellbeing of your employees and operations. Keeping teams up to date with current and accurate information and best practices regarding physical distancing, infection prevention and personal care is vital to ensuring safe workspaces and a strong workforce.

Sodexo can help you leverage the reach of your existing organizational communication channels to stay in touch with the people you count most. Our experts will guide you through the creation of educational and awareness campaigns to deploy across your digital and physical channels. If you need to explore new channels to build a more effective infrastructure, we can advise and assist you there, too.

Building health and wellbeing awareness to encourage active and safe lives

Let your people know how they can help protect each other

In times of uncertainty, frequent and honest communication can provide comfort and cooperation.

Meet Your People Wherever They Are

Communicating via the channels your employees use most frequently ensures everyone gets the updates and information they need to stay safe, healthy and productive.

Digital Apps

- Create engaging & educational campaigns
- Share organizational and team updates, workplace news, remote working support and info on physical distancing and more
- Give your employees access to personal care resources for physical, mental and emotional health and wellness

LCD Screens & Posters

- Use your physical spaces as communication platforms
- Display useful and entertaining videos and posters to provide instruction, information and inspiration to your employees
- Create signage to share new processes and guidelines for community spaces and daily activities

Email & Printed Mailers

- Provide timely updates and information
- Personalize content and delivery method for targeted teams and individuals
- Proactively request responses to gather data and inform continuous program improvement
